Are you interested in BASEBALL, books, politics, government, music, museums, current events, history, science, education, communication, BLOGS, legislation that may affect the way you are allowed to use the internet or eCommerce? If you answered YES to any of these, the C-span network has something for you. Check out my other passion!

In fact, C-SPAN may be the most economical, accessible and efficient way to stay on top of those and 100's of other topics and issues that make the world work the way it does. C-SPAN reaches its audience through the Internet, Podcasts, cable TV, satellite radio, books, its on-line and for-sale archive, its books.

This means that you can consume C-SPAN almost anytime or any place. Start your day with the Washinton Journal; on C-SPAN; keep your mind alert while you work at home or in the office; relax and enjoy one of your special interests or hobbies.

Getting started with C-SPAN

The C-SPAN family and its listening/viewing options are many. Here is the starter kit of links: the homepage, Book TV schedule, the Site Index, daily schedule of program, and the link to subscribe to C-SPAN's emailed programming alerts.

BOOK TV Schedule:

24 hour a day coverage of books and book fairs may be seen on weekends and holidays.

There is a wonderful archive.

Watch the trial live, see the courtroom schematic, read the transcripts

Datadiar is a fairly new company whose site offers information for professionals in the legal field. The information is normally available with a paid subscription. Datadiar decided that the Madrid Bombing trial is important enough that they would broadcast the trial live at no charge, making them the Spanish C-span.
