A spanish legal-services company offers streaming live coverage of Madrid train bombing trials.

I could become so addicted to this. I especially love that "to maintain its neutrality, Datadiar has avoided creating chat forums in connection with the legal issues that it is raising".

And I am so loving the Dukat (or Garak?) icon in connection with this post, LOL.

I guess Court tv isn't a big thing in Spain?

Ah, Garak - that must have been my unconscious mind at work :-)

Court TV doesn't exist in Spain. Coming from a 40 year dictatorship where, when taken to court, the only guarantee was that your trial would NOT be fair, people are still wary of the whole institution. I mean, people trust the law and all, but they are not ready to make it a public spectacle. Which has a good and a bad part, I guess.
